H1 2022 Sales by segments

- Top line ended up mainly helped by Modern Trade & HoReCa sales that added 8% Y/Y and 26% Y/Y, respectively, and by Trigor (Moldova) consolidation with a plus of RON 35m
- The decline of logistics sales (-7% Y/Y), due to reduced volumes, has been more than offset by higher international transport revenues compared with a year ago (+12% Y/Y) on increased tariffs

H1 2022 Own brands sales (+33% Y/Y)

- Aquila launched three new Gradena varieties on the frozen vegetables market - thus increasing the product range for Food Service professionals (HoReCa and Gastro Retail) - and the new packaging under 1 kg for the Retail segment
- The end of the pandemic helped the strong recovery of the Food Service segment and of the sales recorded by La Masă brand

H1 2022 Gross result & OPEX

- Gross result grew by 26% Y/Y overtaking distribution revenues' advance of 11% Y/Y helped by an increased margin to 22% from 19% a year ago following the consolidation of Trigor and HoReCA sales' spike, segments with higher profitability compared with the rest.
- OPEX added 18% Y/Y mainly due to staff costs that grew by 16% Y/Y (+RON 15m) following the consolidation of Trigor and the minimum wage raise by 11% Y/Y and to fuel & transport services expense that increased by 43% Y/Y (+RON 11m) on higher fuel prices compared with a year ago.

H1 2022 EBIT, Net financial result & Net profit

- EBIT added 28% Y/Y mainly helped by the gross result's advance of 26% Y/Y on increased margins.
- Bottom-line hiked 78% Y/Y as the net financial result turned positive to RON 2.8m from a negative level of RON 5.4m reported a year ago on increased net interest income, given the interest rates' advance & reduced debt, and nil other financial expenses compared with a level of RON 3.0m reported in H1 2021 as the company recorded no allowances for the third parties loans

H1 2022 Working capital & ROIWC

- Working capital added RON 79m compared with 2021-end mainly due to the inventory that piled up to secure advantageous prices in an inflationary environment. As days in inventory increased by 14, cash conversion cycle ended 19 days higher compared with 2021-end
- Return on the average Invested Working Capital (ROIWC) remained relatively in line with H1 2021 level with EBIT's growth offset by increased working capital needs. Compared with FY 2021 level, ROIWC is significantly lower also mainly due to the seasonality that drives ~70% of the year's EBIT generation in H2.

H1 2022 Net debt (cash) & Cash flow statement

□ As of June 2022, the net cash position decreased by RON 87m to RON 77m from RON 167m at 2021-end as the cash flow from operations turned negative to RON 26m mainly due to changes in working capital of RON 80m. Also, in H1 2022, Aquila paid dividends of RON 53m and lease liabilities of RON 21m that increased the cash outflow from financing to RON 75m. Helped by proceeds from short-term investments of RON 85m, the period's cash balance ended at RON 27m.

Net profit	Flat Y/Y
CAPEX	EUR 7.6m

- Distribution sales growth expected to decelerate in H2 2022 compared with the first six months of the year on volumes' decline due to soaring shelf prices
- Logistics sales' decrease on lowering year-on-year volumes seen more than offset by the international transport growth on increased tariffs
- Gross profit margin foreseen declining in H2 2022 compared with the first six months of the year as the weight of Modern Trade in total sales is expected to increase. Compared with a year ago, gross margin is seen adding >100 bps due to the strong advance of convenience stores (gas stations included) and to the consolidation of Trigor
- EBITDA adj. expected about flat year-on-year due to fuel, staff, utilities and inflation pressures. FY 2022 other expenses are expected to include extra costs (~ RON 3m) related to post-listing obligations (market making, reporting, ESG, audit, legal).
